HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1904.

NO. 15.

Men's $2.50 Box Calf Shoes For $1.50.

The above reads a little fishy and it may be putting it a little strong, but to be absolutely safe will say the BEST $2.00 shoe ever made for $1.50. It is a fine bright box calf, 3-sole, cap toe, lace shoe, as solid as a rock, in all sizes, 6's to 11's, made in Brockton, Mass., the home of men's fine custom made shoes, such as Stacy Adams and other such makes.

It is a short story quickly told. The Empire Shoe M'fg. Co., at Brockton, Mass., failed a few days ago and Mr. Anderson happened to be on the ground at the time and picked up the few hundred pairs they had on hand at prices that make it possible to make the startling offer at the head of this advertisement. On sale to-day.

PASSES HOUSE.

The Bill Appropriating $75,000 For Western Asylum.

No Trouble Anticipated For the Asylum in the Senate.

Statehouse, Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17.—Speaker Brown was absent when the House convened this morning and Representative Henry Lawrence occupied the chair.

The first business of to-day was the House bill, No. 190, proposing to amend the laws as to the county boards of health, providing that in each county the State Board of Health shall appoint three members, who, with the County Judge and a man elected by the Fiscal Court, shall compose the County Board of Health. Mr. Rogers, of Christian, opposed the bill, as did Mr. McKnight, of Mason, urging that three of the five members be elected by the Fiscal Court of the county.

After some discussion the House refused the amendments and adopted the bill by the vote of 62 to 9.

Appropriates $75,000.

The next special order was the Lawrence bill, appropriating $75,000 for extension and improvements at the Western Asylum for the Insane at Hopkinsville. Mr. Hargrove, of the Charitable Institutions Committee, explained the needs of the asylum. The House passed the bill by the vote of 62 to 11.

Another bill of Mr. Bourne, changing the time of holding Circuit Court in the counties of the Twelfth Judicial district, was considered and adopted.

His bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. R. C. Pace, of the Herndon neighborhood. She is quite pretty and very popular in South Christian society.

ACCIDENT TO DRUMMER.

Team Ran Off and Wagon Was Wrecked.

Mr. David Bourland, the commercial traveler, was thrown from a drummers' wagon on East Ninth street Tuesday afternoon and quite badly bruised.

The horses became frightened and ran off. Mr. Bourland was thrown to the street, but no bones were broken and he was able to go to his home in Crofton a few hours after the accident.

The team ran down Ninth to Main, where the wagon collided with a telephone pole and was badly wrecked. The horses were not injured. Mr. Bourland's trunks were thrown out not far from the L. & N. depot, but were not much damaged.

WAR RUMORS.

But a Scarcity of Definite News From the Orient.

Japan Keeping Her Own Counsel and Russia Glad of Any Delay.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Rear Admiral Evans, commanding the Asiatic station, today transmitted to the Navy Department a cablegram from Commander Staunton, of the gunboat Helena, in dock at New Chwang, in which he says that conditions there are greatly disturbed, and that he is vigorously investigating the report that Russian officials have delayed certain American and British merchantmen. The rioting continues, and foreigners are threatened by Russian soldiers.

In the event that the American Consulate is endangered, it is stated that Commander Staunton will land bluejackets and marines for the protection of Consul Miller.

There is every wish on the part of this government not to give the slightest cause for complaint by Russia or Japan of intervention, but the unalterable American policy of protecting American interests at all hazards will be adhered to.

Progress of War.

Rioting in New Chwang by the Russian troops may force landing of American jacks to protect Consul Miller.

Admiral Alexieff will play waiting game, but will resist attack along the Yalu river.

News of another dash by Japanese torpedo boats is confirmed.

Critics say Japan will make no general advance until an army of 300,000 is massed and can operate from well established bases.

St. Petersburg hopes severe weather will force delay and permit mobilization of Czar's army.

St. Petersburg cables declare that Viceroy Alexieff will move his headquarters to Mukden.

TROOPS IN COREA.

Japan Has Already Landed 121,000 Men.

London, Feb. 17.—The correspondent at Chemulpo of the Daily Express makes the astonishing statement that Japan has already landed 120,000 troops in Corea, 80,000 of whom are extended along the fighting front south of the Yalu River. The London press attaches the greatest significance to the departure of Viceroy Alexieff from Port Arthur and comments upon the sudden throwing of Russian troops into New Chwang as indicating Russian apprehensions that Port Arthur is in danger and that the Japanese attack may not, after all, be made where it is expected on the Yalu.

All the reports tend to confirm the impression that Russia has little or nothing to expect from sea operations.

According to a dispatch to the Paris edition of the New York Herald 400 torpedoes, being two-thirds of Russia's entire available supply of these articles, were destroyed on board the Russian cruiser Variag at Chemulpo.

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Chronicle cables that it is stated officially that several thousand Russian troops have reached Antung and that it is rumored that 20,000 Russians have arrived at Ping Yang on the Tatong River in Central Corea. The Chronicle, however, regards this rumor as improbable unless the invasion of Corea preceded the outbreak of hostilities.

It is said that Great Britain is about to appoint consuls at Mukden and Antung.

According to special dispatches published here this morning from Tokio, the Russian cruiser squadron has returned to Vladivostok. The Tokio correspondent of the

LYING AT PORT ARTHUR.

Seven Disabled Russian Warships Described by Correspondent.

London, Feb. 16.—In a dispatch dated Port Arthur, Feb. 13, a correspondent of the Times gives a description of seven Russian warships which he says are lying disabled there. They include the battleships Sevastopol and Petropavlovsk, which have not been named in previous reports of the action.

The correspondent says that all together eleven Russian ships were put out of action at Port Arthur.

Continuing he declares that the Japanese were driven from the neighborhood of Kin Chau, near New Chwang, after a skirmish, in which 150 Japanese were taken prisoners and 70 Russians were killed. In an editorial article the Times remarks that as this correspondent does not mention the injuries sustained by the battleships and as the Kin Chau story has not been reported from any other source, it would be well to accept his reports with some reserve.

CRUISER SINKS.

The Boyarin Strikes a Mine Near Port Arthur and 107 Lives Are Lost.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 16.—A dispatch from Admiral Alexieff announces another disaster to the Russian fleet at Port Arthur. According to the Viceroy's report the cruiser Boyarin was destroyed by a mine on Feb. 13, with a loss of 197 officers and men. No details of the affair are given out, but it is believed the cruiser accidentally hit a mine in the same manner as the torpedo transport Yenesei, which was destroyed with loss of life of 95. The Boyarin was 148 feet long, 34 feet beam and 16 feet draught. She was of 3,200 tons displacement, and her trial speed was 25 knots. Her armament consisted of six 4.7-inch guns and three machine guns. She was also fitted with six torpedo tubes. The Boyarin was last reported as having taken part in the engagement of Feb. 9 at Port Arthur.

Japs Sending Troop to Front. Tokio, Feb. 17.—Eight transports with Japanese troops from Nagasaki and several additional vessels carrying war munitions are on their way to the West coast of Korea. Detachments of Japanese cavalry have already landed at Wiju on the Yalu river.

Port Arthur, Feb. 17.—The reports that the Japanese have concentrated about 60,000 troops at Wonsan (on the east coast of Korea) with the object of entering Manchuria, are confirmed.

Paris, Feb. 17.—An official dispatch received here today from Tokio announces that one of the most important movements of Japanese troops yet made is occurring today. One of the main branches of the army, consisting of three divisions and including a division of guards, is now going on board transports. The previous landings of Japanese forces in Korea and elsewhere are said to have been small compared with this simultaneous sailing of three divisions, aggregating approximately an army of 30,000 to 50,000 men.

HAD CLOSE CALL.

Workman Hurled Some Distance and Knocked Insensible.

Mr. Marvin Cooksey was quite badly hurt while at work at a stove mill near Crofton Tuesday.

Mr. Cooksey was assisting in throwing off a belt when he was caught in some way and hurled violently against the frame work which holds the counter shaft. He was knocked insensible and remained in that condition several minutes. A gash three inches long was cut under one of his eyes and he sustained several bad bruises. It was at first thought that he had been fatally injured, but he finally rallied and will recover. He had a very close call, however.

QUARANTINE RAISED.

Small-pox Patients in North Christian About Well.

All but one of the small-pox patients in North Christian are convalescent and the last party that became a victim of the disease is doing quite well. The quarantine has been raised and there is hardly a possibility of a further spread of the disease. All of the cases developed from one to two miles west of Crofton. It has been reported that there were several cases of small-pox in that place, but this is not true. There is not a case in that town, nor has there been one there.

FIRE AT EMPIRE.

Dwelling And Its Contents Destroyed by Flames.

A dwelling at Empire, owned by Mrs. Lou Armstrong, of Crofton, and occupied by Mrs. Davis, formerly of Hopkinsville, was totally destroyed by fire, together with its contents, about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. The loss is several hundred dollars. There was no insurance.

It is not known how the fire originated.

LEADING COMPANIES IN THE BALTIMORE FIRE.

THE ROYAL, the leading Fire Insurance Company of the world, is now adjusting and paying its losses of ONE MILLION DOLLARS by draft upon the home office, WITHOUT DISCOUNT, thereby not reducing its United States funds, and have authorized a subscription of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS for the fire sufferers. As we represent the "ROYAL" and several other companies largely interested in the Baltimore fire, and do a very large, if not the largest, city business of any single agency, the people of Hopkinsville will be interested to know that we have official information from each company that they have more cash on deposit than will be required to meet their losses, and that their securities will remain intact.

IN CONGRESS.

Mon. A. O. Stanley Makes a Telling Speech in Favor of the Extradition Amendment.

Below we give the speech of our Congressman A. O. Stanley made in congress a few days ago in favor of the amendment to the laws upon our Extradition, offered by Hon. Ollie James.

Don't fail to read the speech which follows:

Mr. Stanley.—Mr. Chairman, I was not surprised at the speech made a few minutes ago by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Crum-packer). I was amazed at the utterance of my genial friend the other Representative from Indiana (Mr. Hemenway).

To belittle, to traduce, to hold up in feeble way to contumely and contempt a great part of this Union, for the simple reason that it happens to fall within a political divison not his own and within the horoscope of his long cherished and long-nourished hate, is enough for the gentleman from Indiana, without regard to the merits of the case. The gentleman does after his kind. There is not a criminal Magdalen in all this world who does believe there is virtue in her sister. There is not an unprincipled thief who finds honesty in mankind, and there is not a blind partisan hater by profession and by political faith who finds virtue in those who oppose him.

Partisan measures, partisan strife, partisan denunciation are part and parcel of his political capital and his political life. I was amazed, however, to hear the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hemenway) assail as he has done, my native State. We are told, Mr. Chairman, that we should keep cool, that we should be serene, that we should express no feeling of resentment, no feeling of pain when the mightiest man in all our Commonwealth falls at the hand of a secret assassin in the discharge of his duty. I thank God that neither a Democrat nor Republican until the day of Goebel's assassination ever knew what it was to keep cool, to be serene, to be untroubled in such a tragic hour.

What would that heartbroken crowd at Buffalo have thought if some one of the learned gentlemen on the other side had wrapped his mantle about him turned away from the bleeding victim of Czolgosz and had said that this forsooth was a political crime; do not get excited. What would you have thought when Lincoln fell here in this capital, when all the land was anger and amazement, if some new disciple of this philosophy, that there is such a thing as a political crime, that murder has a political home and assassination a political refuge; that would you have thought if he had said that this man who slew the lamented Lincoln was his political foe and this was a political crime?

I deny that there is such a thing as political assassination. I deny that there is such a thing as political murder so far as my party is concerned. I deny that outside of the political confines of the State of Indiana there is to-day in any country, free or enslaved, under a presidency or under a despot, a single spot on earth where an assassin can find refuge because of the complexity, the political faith, of his hapless victim.

Mr. Hepburn.—Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. Stanley.—Why, certainly.

Mr. Hepburn.—Did not this man upon whom you have delivered such a panegyric himself assassinate a mau?

Mr. Stanley.—This man—

Mr. Hepburn.—I simply ask the fact.

Mr. Stanley.—I wish to answer you, sir.

Mr. Hepburn.—Will the gentleman answer me?

Mr. Stanley.—Yes, sir, I am answering you now. This man was as brave as Taylor is cowardly—

Mr. Hepburn.—Will you answer my question?

Mr. Stanley.—Yes, sir; and those who slew him as cowardly and false—

Mr. Hepburn.—Will you answer the question?

Mr. Stanley.—Yes, sir; I am answering you. He imbed his hand in the blood of his fellowman, in defense of his person and in defense of his sacred honor, under the clear skies, in the presence of all men in the open street.

Mr. Stanley.—And he found an asylum in Kentucky after he did it, did he not?

Mr. Stanley.—No, sir; he found a defense—

Mr. Gooch.—After he was shot.

Mr. Stanley (continuing).—He found a defense in the court which will give to Taylor a fair trial. No jury, however partisan, Democrat or Republican, from that day to this, has ever indicted him for this offense, and William Goebel himself wore upon his body the wound of a pistol bullet from the hand of the gamest man and best shot in Kentucky.

Mr. Smith of Kentucky.—I would like to make one suggestion in that connection. Did not Goebel in that case positively decline a pardon from the governor of Kentucky?

Mr. Stanley.—Yes.

Mr. Kehoe.—By a Republican governor?

Mr. Smith of Kentucky.—No.

Mr. Stanley.—I wish to say to the gentleman from Iowa, because I know that he would not, unless he were grossly misinformed, here in this place, where his voice is to be heard in all the land recognizing as I do his prominence and his power, he would not stoop in order to shield this man Taylor to belittle and belabor with a charge absolutely false the grave of Kentucky's honored dead. I wish today to you, sir, that the man who he assassinated first assailed him in character, first maligned him in the public print.

I saw that same William Goebel at August stand mute but fearless under the taunts of this same man. He had persecuted him for years. He met him on the streets in Covington; he asked him if he had written an article containing statements reflecting upon him, and before Goebel could answer his assailant fired a shot, striking him in the side, which he carried to his death. Goebel then fired at his opponent. There were only two shots fired; and if you will tell me how a man can shoot another after he himself has been shot through the brain, then I will tell you how Sanford was assassinated by Goebel.

Sanford fell with a bullet in his brain—through the center of the forehead. Goebel was found afterwards, torn and bleeding by the bullet that plowed its way around his body. You can not assassinate a man that way. There was no smokeless powder there; there was no Marlin rifle there; there was no fleeing there. He shot him in the city of Covington, where his (Goebel's) most powerful opponents were.

The Chairman.—The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. Stanley.—I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that I may have five minutes more.

Mr. Gaines of Tennessee.—I will yield to the gentleman my time.

Mr. Hitt.—I will yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. Gaines of Tennessee.—I would like to ask the gentleman, did not Goebel stand trial by a Kentucky jury?

Mr. Stanley.—Yes, Now I wish to say that the only Republican who ever was and who over will be governor of my State would be the first to refute that charge, because he was the first to pass an encomium on the manliness of Goebel; the first to praise the justice of the offering of that reward of $100,000. I wish to say this to the gentleman and to this House, that there was never until Goebel had been assassinated, in any party or any set of people, not even among his bitterest enemies, a living soul that dared to charge that he was an assassin.

The man he killed was as gallant and as brave a rebel officer as ever rode to the stars and bars. He was absolutely fearless; he was a crack shot, and it was thought that to stand before the fire of Sanford was certain death. Such was the man who determined to silence William Goebel and to remove him from the political arena. He stood the assaults of that man for years with patience, and at last, driven to the wall, acted absolutely in his own self defense, and the best friends that Sanford has to-day, including a United States Senator from my own State, who went with the dead Sanford to his grave, was the first to recognize, and the first to praise the manliness and courage of William Goebel.

'Assassination is comparatively unknown in central and western Kentucky. There may be a disregard, as some see it, for human life, but in Kentucky they look each other in the eye when they fire. In all my life, living in and around Lexington and western Kentucky, in that part known as the "blue-grass" region and the "penynille," I have never known a man of standing to be even charged with assassination. I have known but one instance in all that time where assassination was ever committed in that section of the country.

It is for that reason that we feel this anger now; it is for that reason that when this question is again discussed and when the bloody garments of William Goebel are unveiled before you, and when his memory is assailed by every species of slander, malignity, and hate, when falsehood does the work that assassination left incomplete—it is then that every Kentuckian, not only within the halls of Congress, but within the confines of my native State, feels the blood mount to his cheek and is ready at all times and under all circumstances, with his life if need be, to defend the sacred honor of his native State and the stainless courage and character of her martyred dead. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

Fully Satisfied.

"During the latter part of last summer I noticed some slight, but a dull aching across the small of my back which kept getting worse until finally the pain became so severe that I was hardly able to walk around, as many times could not attend to my household duties. The trouble I believe came from the kidneys for I suffered from other distressing symptoms of this complaint. I was subject to the most severe headaches and frequent attacks of dizziness. I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills and my husband got a box for me at Thomas & Traher's drug store. They did me a wonderful amount of good. I felt much better and stronger in every way than I had for some years. I do not know what I should have done if it had not been for Doan's Kidney Pills."

PRONOUNCING "RALEIGH."
 Col. Raleigh is Against Sounding It to Rhyme with "Raw."
 According to Mr. Adrian Wheeler, the pronunciation of "Raleigh" seems to be "Rawley." Whether this only means "seems to be" is to be surmised, says Notes and queries.

The question is what was the pronunciation at the period indicated? And surely that is much a matter of surmise also. (When Sir Walter Raleigh's name was told (Raleigh), said the king: "On my soul, mon, I have not heard rawley of thee." ("not 'raw' ley.")

The conjecture presumably must be that King James, with a labored jog, founded on the sound then given to Raleigh (or Rawley), meant: "I have not heard 'rawley' with the 'rale' sound that the Irish still give to the word 'real' or 'rarely,' with the meaning: 'I have heard 'rare' things of thee," or the same word with the present meaning: "I have heard seldom of thee (of late)."

The assumption that King James must have sounded the letters "raw" as we now do surely requires some proof.

Now in the old northern records one may find the name Maitland (and even Maytland) spelled also "Mautland." It is conceivable to the present writer that the men who wrote "Mautland" may have pronounced the word "Mautland," but it is inconceivable to him that the men who wrote "Maitland" and the men who wrote "Mortland," for that is what our modern tongues have brought the "au" and the "aw" to, as to sound.

Is there known to be any other origin for the surname of "Raleigh" than the place name "Raleigh"? If not that place name stands this day in the way of the "Rawley" ("Rorly") pronouncers. En passant it may be worth remarking that "rare" meat" and "raw meat" are much about the same thing. Can it be proved that "rare" with the "raw" meaning, is anything more than a phonetic spelling of the sound given of old to the combined letters "raw"? It may be recollected that it has been allowed that the proper sound of "Ralph" (often spelled "Rawfe" in old deeds) is "Rafe," rhyming with "safe."

AFoot AT THE HORSE SHOW.
 What You Go to See and Hear According to a Reporter.

At the very portico of the garden one catches the volatile spirit of the horse show, writes Emory Pottle, in Everybody's Magazine. Boys are calling everywhere (they know what we like): "Get your programmes containing a full list of the box-holders. Buy a programme and find out who every body is." Line upon line of carriages block the way, their brilliant surfaces reflecting hundreds of electric lights and a hurry upon the inclined passageway with the air of worldly obnoxiousness which is so much a part of the city dweller.

With inward humility, concealing as best I may the fact that I am entering on a press ticket, I fall in behind a gay party. There is a girl of that slender, appealing delicacy of figure and frank level gaze of eyes which characterize the American daughter. I suppose the handsomely constructed lady with her is her mother, and there, too, is her father, dispassionate, but with a whimsical appreciation of his position as a father and a captain of industry, which creeps into the lines about his forehead, sharply cut lips. The girl is the slowest of gracious, well-groomed, beautifully groomed, unassuming, expensive womanhood. All about her are hundreds of her own splendid kind. One is struck with the other complete poise and comeliness of these neighbors for a night, whom he knows vaguely and a little curiously as Society. It makes but scant difference how they got there—by way of wheat, or lands, or steel, or cotton, or steamboats—the result is eminently pleasing to behold. Personally I am glad of them and I freely acknowledge that this is their show.

Real Proof.
 Real proof of the pudding is the state of your stomach a few hours after eating it.

HORSE HAD LONG MEMORY.

No Bagpipe Player Could Bother Him Without Punishment.
 If Duncan McTulloch, bagpipe-blower, had had more music in his mechanical bladder than he had in his soul he would not have been so outrageously assailed by a horse in Brooklyn nor belted in lint, not to speak of being arrested by the Adams street police, says the New York Herald.

Dressed in real Highland kilts, McTulloch went down Bridge street at nine o'clock Saturday night. The street was crowded with peddlers' wagons and shop-lifters. The laborer was willing and the harp seemed sad, and gayly McTulloch squeezed out his music.

"He-e-e, Ho-o-o, Hi-i-i," went McTulloch.
 At Concord and Bridge streets stood the horse of Peter Harper. "Hi Hi! Hi!" went McTulloch. Beyond the horse there was an Assyrian serving out fortunes by the occult canary route at a penny a peep.

"Ye-ho, ye-ho, ye-ho-hi-ho-he," went McTulloch.
 The dispenser of fortunes gave him a penny to go away. The McTulloch thought the coin was a tangible token of appreciation. "Ho-ho-ho-ho!" went McTulloch.

Peter Harper's horse reared and rushed at the piper. "He-he!" went McTulloch. The horse butted him on the bosom with his head, then reared and smote the bagpipe blower above the heart with his front feet, using one after the other like a pugilist.

When McTulloch's bagpipes expired in the street with a groan the crowd pulled the horse off. In a neighboring drug store the dents in the bosom of the highlander were smoothed. Then the police interfered. McTulloch's case was dismissed.

Mr. Harper explained that his horse was an old circus animal, bred in England. It was once stolen by a wild McFarlane, he explained, and compelled to subsist on haggis and heather.

WHO LIKES TO LEND BOOKS?

Might as Well Borrow Pictures or Some of the Furniture.
 I wonder if there is anyone who really likes lending books—anyone, that is to say, except an official in a public lending library, says the London Sketch.

For my own part, I candidly admit that the man or woman who borrows one of my books runs: grave risk of forfeiting my friendship. One would not mind so much, perhaps, if the volumes were ever returned. But they never are; the shelf from which the book has been taken wears a mournful, desecrated appearance for six months or so, and then another volume is found to fill the gap.

The intrinsic value of the book, very often, is a mere nothing. It would be quite a simple thing to buy another copy of the same work. But a copy that one has read is a familiar thing, while a new copy never seems to make real friends with the other volumes on the shelf.

I look upon my books, too, as furniture, decorations, what you will. I like to have them about me, to look at their bindings in the half-light, to feel that they are there when I am dozing off before the fire. A man might just as well borrow one of my vases, or one of my pictures, as a book.

Just imagine what a fearful thing it would be if one's friends got into the habit of borrowing pictures. 'That's an awfully jolly thing you've got there, old man. Just lend it to me for a month or two, will you?' The idea seems absurd, but the people who borrow books are just as likely to borrow anything else.

In the Philippines.

A preliminary report received by the war department from Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Sanger, superintendent of the Philippine census, shows that the total population of the islands is approximately 6,976, 874 persons, including about 600, 000 members of "wild tribes." The most populous province is Cebu, with 631, 621 civilized inhabitants. Manila province has 319, 941, and Cebu adjoining, 124, 439.

MARK HANNA.

Death of The Great Leader and Republican Manager.

Succumbs to Typhoid Fever After Final Illness of Two Weeks.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senator Marcus Hanna died at 6:40 o'clock this evening after an illness extending over nearly two months, filled with apparent recoveries, followed by relapse and finally drifting into typhoid fever, which weakened his condition to an extent he was unable to withstand.

When the end came all members of the senator's family were in the room except Mrs. Hanna, the senator's wife, and Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Hanna. Mrs. Hanna had left the room only a few minutes before.

BRIEF BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Hanna Gained His Fame During One Term As Senator.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Marcus A. Hanna was born in New Lisbon, Columbia county, Ohio, September 24, 1837. He removed with his parents to Cleveland in 1852. He was educated in the common schools of Cleveland and the Western Reserve college at Hudson, Ohio. He was employed in the wholesale grocery business, then in the hardware business, then in the coal business. His father died in 1862. "Mark" represented his interests in the firm until 1867, when the firm closed up. He then became a member of Rhodes & Co., dealers in iron and coal. After ten years the firm was changed to M. A. Hanna & Co., which still occupies several floors in the Perry-Payne building in Cleveland.

He was largely identified with the lake carrying business, owning vessels and constructing vessels. He was president of the Union National Bank of Cleveland, and of the city street railway. He was appointed by President Cleveland, in 1885, a director of the Union Pacific railway, and was delegate-at-large to the Republican national conventions of 1884 and 1889, and chairman of the Republican national committee since 1896, when he made a national reputation as organizer of the interests that nominated McKinley, as well as elected him.

Recently Re-elected to Senate.

Mr. Hanna was appointed United States Senator by Gov. Bushnell, March 5, 1897, succeeding John Sherman, who became secretary of state under McKinley. In January, 1898 he was elected for the rest of Sherman's term, ending March 3, 1899, and also for the succeeding full term. Last month he was re-elected for another full term in the senate, ending in March, 1911.

Kills Himself While on a Visit.

Sebre, Ky., Feb. 16.—James A. Melton committed suicide near here. Mrs. Melton was visiting at her mother's, and toward sunset Mr. Melton went out, and after remaining awhile asked Mrs. Melton to return home with him. This she declined to do, and without further ado about it Mr. Melton walked out of the room, and, taking a pistol from his pocket, fired a ball into his brain.

Railroad Commission in Session.

Glasgow, Ky., Feb. 15.—The state railroad commission has been in session here today and will remain in session all day Tuesday. The board is hearing complaints from the citizens over the rates charged by the local branch railroad.

To Urge Redistricting Bill.

Jackson, Ky., Feb. 15.—Judge Rodwine, Jim Hargis and several others left for Frankfort tonight in the interest of the redistricting bill.

TOLL LINE CONNECTIONS.

Expected to be Completed Early in The Spring by Home Telephone Co.

It is expected that the patrons of the Clarksville Home Telephone Company will have toll line connections to Hopkinsville very shortly now. Arrangements are being consummated so that early in the spring toll lines will be completed into Hopkinsville, and a toll station opened which will give service to the patrons of the Home Company to Hopkinsville, and as soon as the plant of the Hopkinsville Home Telephone Company is completed direct connection will be had between the patrons of both Home Companies.

Arrangements are being consummated also which will give the patrons of the Clarksville Home Telephone Company a through circuit to Louisville from Clarksville. This will open up Bowling Green and all of the independent plants of Kentucky now connected to the Louisville independent Long Distance Telephone Company. With the excellent service of the Home Co. at Clarksville, this will be an important connection for the Kentucky units. Text

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes blemishes in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lacerated, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." Mrs. R. T. Spencer, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills will rid you of it, fully and permanently, as they have, rid thousands.

The George Bill restoring the viva voce system of voting in Kentucky by constitutional amendment, which has passed the Senate, has been favorably reported in the House and will pass that body. A man has a right to know how his vote was counted after it was cast, and this is not possible under the fraudulent system now in vogue. Give us the old fashioned, manly way of voting.

Under the will of the late Capt. Parr, of Louisville, who left $450,000 to equip and endow "a home for friendless and destitute women in Kentucky," the trustees have in incorporated under the name of "Parr's Rest." Of course his kindred will fight the bequest in the courts.

A correspondent says Gen. Ali-kahoff and many other Russian generals are Asiatic subjects who assumed such names as Ali-kahoff by adding "off" to them. If these warriors take the extra syllables with them to Korea they are liable to have them shot off.

Congressman J. F. Shafroth, a Democrat from Colorado, resigned his seat in Congress Monday, stating that he had discovered from the contest for his seat that his election was tainted with fraud. He concluded by asking that the Republican contestant be given his seat.

Suicide Prevented.

The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered will interest many. A run down system, or despondency, invariably precedes suicide and something has been found that will prevent that condition which makes suicide likely. At the first thought of self destruction take Electric Bitters. It being a great tonic and nerve will strengthen the nerves and build up the system. Madisonville, Ky., Feb. 16.—The commonwealth rested in the case against J. B. Lindie for the murder of Jesse Burton at Earlington. Eighty two witnesses were examined, seventy-five of these were eye witnesses. The commonwealth's attorney says he has made out one of the best cases of murder a jury ever saw. The defense will commence its testimony in the morning.

THE HEARST BOOM

Is Attracting Much Attention At Washington.

Washington, D. C. Feb. 17.—The Hearst candidacy for President is receiving unprecedented comment at present in the national capital from the fact that many papers in this country who have hitherto ignored Mr. Hearst's candidacy are now making generous comments thereupon. Some of the papers that seek to belittle Mr. Hearst's candidacy are edited by men or rather controlled by men, who have made signal success in other walks of life, but a dismal failure in the newspaper business. This is not only true of one Frank A. Munsey, who made money as a publisher of a cheap magazine, but who has lost about all he has made as the publisher of daily newspapers. Mr. Munsey's paper, the Washington Times, attacks Mr. Hearst bitterly without presenting arguments against him and without shadow of excuse. This may be expected of a man who employed men responsible for the post office investigation, but who had not the courage to withstand the onslaughts of corporate interests and who discharged from his service the very man who started this investigation into the rottenness of Republican officialism. These attacks on Mr. Hearst from such a source are causing comment here and there and thereby increasing the standing of Mr. Hearst as a Democrat and an honest man. The recent decision of the Republican Attorney-General in the state of New York, not to bring action against the Coal Trust under the application of Mr. Hearst, has raised the trust issue as the living issue of the next campaign, and Mr. Hearst as its exponent, in the minds of the leaders of Democracy.

Home.

Not polished floor, nor picture hung wall,
Nor a house that's half reception hall.

But an arm chair wide, clean hearth beside,
Inviting one to there abide.

Not butler's pantry nor range "Majestic," Reigned over by a proud domestic;

But a kitchen wide with ceiling warmed by the firelight's flickering glow.

Where the children romp and play hide and seek,
And aunt Chloe dozes, but half asleep;

Where the shadows are fitful, the deep and wide,
And the house cat purrs the hearth beside.

Not windows draped with artistic fold,
Hiding the glow of the sun's bright gold;

But simplest muslin curtains tied—A book to read, a seat beside.

With a view thro window of dale and hill,
Of nearby village, and distant mill,

Of winding creek and shadowed bridge,
Of the farm house on the distant ridge.

Not friends who come at fashion's call,
Who are willing slaves of fashions thrall,

But the friend who quietly enters in,
Whose spirit with ours claims primal kin.

These, these are a part of the home ideal;
Pleasures which last, heartwarm and real.

—ROSEMARY.

Dr. E. P. Russell.

The passing of Dr. Russell reminds us forcibly at how great a premium is now come to be held that magnetic personality born of a vigorous manhood, of which he was so marked an exponent.

This day of self-seeking, grasping after wealth, fighting for social supremacy, pulling ones self up, by pulling others down, is not conducive to the growth of such men. If they are born such, they soon become tainted with the miasma that surrounds them; little meannesses begin to cling to them like barnacles to a ship's bottom, and they founder in the sea of the mediocre. The men that escape this inoculation are at a premium. We sometimes refer to them as gentlemen of the old school.

Dr. Russell was distinctly of this class. He was brave and patriotic. In his eighteenth year he enlisted as a volunteer, and fought for the lost cause, one of the flower of Southern manhood, and like all the rest he came not out scatheless, but carried not only the marks, but the physical effects of that terrible ordeal to his grave.

He stood well up in his chosen profession and did a big practice, even up to the time of his complete disability.

After the death of his son, Jack, he was never quite the same man, and often was compelled to decline a call, but never so long as he could drag himself to his buggy did he fail to respond to a call to the bedside of a woman or a child.

His tenderness was proverbial, and in the sick room his sympathetic nature often clashed with professional stoicism. He was generous to a fault, never pressed a recalcitrant debtor, and never denied a friend, on the plea of charity.

He was a brave man and true. Though his friends deplore his loss, yet down in their hearts they know that since he became disabled he would have had it thus.

Want will miss his open hand and many a sufferer the ray of sunshine that always followed him into the sick room, and many a throbbing temple will miss the pressure of that gentle hand.

Though we have him no longer in our midst, yet the glance of that eye, and the sound of that voice still remain.

While courage tribute still compels, And heart with patriotism swells, While "Wart" bewails her shroudless, And suffering craves of Tenders; While deeds of lover's manhood grace, Let time his country's shrill efface, No stone need mark his resting place! Feb. 18, 1904. G. E. G.

Succumbs to His Malady at Evansville Tuesday Night.

A Gallant Soldier, a Distinguished Physician and Popular Gentleman.

After a long and hopeless struggle against the inevitable, Dr. Ephraim P. Russell died Tuesday night at 11 o'clock, in Walker's Sanatorium at Evansville.

Last fall Dr. Russell used a knife to remove a bunion or corn from the little toe of his left foot. It became inflamed and refused to heal and finally became gangrenous and the toe was amputated. The trouble was in a foot rendered more susceptible to blood poisoning by reason of an old wound received in battle. The operation did not bring the desired relief and a month ago Dr. Russell was taken to Evansville for further treatment. The reports from him were at first encouraging, but later the disease began to spread and a week before his death his left leg was taken off above the knee. He stood the shock well, but the poison was in his blood and to make matters worse it developed that he was suffering from Bright's disease. He suffered a relapse and gradually sank to the end.

Dr. Russell was born in Todd county, Sept. 21, 1844. When a boy of 17 he entered the Confederate army and fought gallantly until disabled by wounds. His first service was as Second Lieutenant in Breckinridge's escort. Later he served in the Second Kentucky and Eighth Tennessee Regiments. He was wounded at Chickamauga, at London and Bristol. His last wound disabled him and he was taken prisoner. Through the good offices of a Union friend in the surgical corps, he was allowed to study medicine while a prisoner, and after the close of the war he completed his medical education and entered upon the practice of medicine at Elkton.

He married Miss McReynolds, of Elkton, and to them were born two children, Mrs. Ford L. Wilkinson and the late Lieut. Jack Russell, who died two years ago from wounds received in the Philippines. His first wife died fifteen years ago and about nine years ago Dr. Russell removed to Hopkinsville and soon took a prominent place in the medical circles of this city.

About seven years ago he was married to Miss Genevieve Henry, a daughter of Mrs. Kate Henry and a sister of Mayor Joutet Henry.

The tragic death of his only son, saddened the closing years of his well spent life.

Young Jack Russell, when the war of 1898 broke out, tried to enlist but failed to pass the physical examination on account of defective eyesight. But he was determined to join the army and through influential friends obtained a special permit and was sent to the front in the far east. He was soon in the thick of the fiercest fighting and in a sudden attack on the American camp by natives received his death wound. He was shot through the leg, but while lying on the ground continued to fire his gun and aided in repulsing the bold men. He lingered many long and weary months in a hospital and finally his left leg was amputated and later he died from blood poisoning. The body of the brave young soldier was brought back to his old home at Elkton and laid beside that of his mother.

Dr. Russell's body was brought home Wednesday afternoon in charge of his son-in-law, Mr. F. L. Wilkinson, who was with him when he died. The burial took place yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, from his late residence on East Ninth street. Brief services were held and the body was followed to its last resting place in Hopewell cemetery by a large number of sorrowing friends.

Dr. Russell during his residence here formed many warm friendships. He was popular in social circles, prominent in his profession and honored and esteemed as a good and useful citizen. He was upright and honorable, kind-hearted and charitable. He was a thorough gentleman, courteous, companionable, generous and noble in character.

He was a member of the Christian church and also a member of Ned Merriweather Camp U. C. V., of this city.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble is prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

JUDGMENT AFFIRMED

In The Daniel Insurance Case From This County.

The Court of Appeals, by Judge Nunn, whole court sitting, Wednesday affirmed the Christian Circuit Court in the case of the Continental Insurance Company vs. Elijah Daniel, col. The company resisted the payment of a $250 fire insurance policy on the ground the appellant had not complied with the clause in the policy which requires the claim to be presented within sixty days. This court holds that the allegation was denied and that the company's claim was based on a denial of damage. This court upholds the judgment and holds it a matter for the jury.

SCHAEFER MURDER

M'Donald Believed To Be Guilty of The Crime.

Grand Jury meets And Will make a Thorough Investigation of the Murder Mystery.

Bedford, Ind., Feb. 16.—The Lawrence county grand jury convened to-day and before its adjournment the Shafer murder case will have careful investigation. S. B. Lowe, former prosecuting attorney, will aid Prosecutor Miller and his chief deputy, Mr. Stephenson, in presenting the evidence to the grand jury. While the public is slow to accept the theory that James McDonald is the murderer, still it relies very much on the declaration by S. B. Lowe, president of the school board and a leading member of the investigating committee, when he says:

"We have the man who murdered Miss Schaefer. Of this there is no doubt."

Detective Reed, supplementing by asserting that McDonald's motive was assault and robbery, and he adds:

"McDonald is undoubtedly guilty, and I think will confess, and then the people will see their mistake."

There is no general ill-felling against the accused, and when he is brought back here for trial he will be given a fair and impartial hearing.

McDonald Taken to Bloomington.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 16.—At 11 o'clock to-day Bloomington was surprised by the arrival of James McDonald from the Jefferson prison charge of Sheriff Smith, of Bedford, and Detective Reed. As soon as the train stopped the officers hurried off the rear platform of the smoker. The Sheriff had McDonald handcuffed to him, and they were half way to the jail before the people knew he was in town.

At the jail, Sheriff Traher and the officers held a conference. After looking over the department, Reed said he wanted McDonald placed in the women's department. He was taken there and orders given for no one to see or converse with him. Judge Wilson says he will be kept here until the grand jury reports. There is no inclination here to molest McDonald and he is perfectly safe.

HAPPY AND HEALTHY.

A Beautiful Canadian Girl Saved From Catarrh of the Lungs by Pe-ru-na.

MISS FLORENCE KENAH.

Miss Florence E. Kenah, 434 Maria street, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"A few months ago I caught a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and remained there so persistently that I became alarmed. I took medicine without benefit, until my digestive organs became upset, and my head and back began to ache severely and frequently. I was advised to try Peru-na, and although I had little faith I felt so sick that I was ready to try anything. It brought me blessed relief at once, and I felt that I had the right medicine at last. Within three weeks I was completely restored and have enjoyed perfect health since."

F. E. KENAH.

WOMEN should beware of contracting catarrh. The cold wind and rain, sleet and mud of winter are especially conducive to catarrhal derangements. Few women escape.

Upon the first symptoms of catching cold Peru-na should be taken. It fortifies the system against colds and catarrh.

The following letter gives one young woman's experience with Peru-na:

Miss Rose Gerbing is a popular society woman of Crown Point, Ind., and she writes the following:

"Recently I took a long drive in the country, and being too thinly clad I caught a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, and which I could not seem to shake off. I felt as if I could not breathe, and I was very miserable."

Dr. Hartman, President of the Pe-ru-na Sanitarium, Columbus, O., writes:

"If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis."

THE CROWN PRINCE

ON A JANUARY WALK

Short Sketch of the Hair Apparent of the German Empire.

One of the Most Interesting Young Men of Europe—Recommends His Distinguished Father in Many Ways.

A great inheritance like the German imperial crown is apt to weigh a trifle heavy on youthful shoulders. The German crown prince was only six years old when he became heir apparent, and from that time the idea of his future duties and responsibilities was always kept before him till the boy became serious beyond his years. Now, as a young man of nearly 22, he shows the marks of his rigid education, being of a quiet and thoughtful disposition and still somewhat shy.

With a father of such striking personality as Emperor William, the prince is naturally somewhat in the background, but it is not from weakness of character. The emperor has always made a great companion of his eldest boy, and father and son are much alike in many ways—the stern sense of duty, military tastes and love of sport, for instance.

As the future head of a soldier nation, Prince William was encouraged in things military from his very cradle, tradition relating that at 2 1/2 he insisted on sleeping with a miniature rifle on his arm. He was a delicate, slight boy, and made a tiny soldier indeed when he entered the Prussian foot guards at the age of ten, according to the custom of German princes. With his next brother, Eitel Fritz, the crown prince worked very hard, first at home in Potsdam, and then at the college at Plon, in Schleswig-Holstein. On finishing his course there, the prince went to Bonn, where he thoroughly enjoyed university life, and maturated with due honors.

It was whilst he was at Bonn that he was besieged one day by a deputation of schoolgirls, who brought postcards for him to sign. After the prince had attained his majority—celebrated with

CROWN PRINCE WILLIAM

much ceremony at Berlin—he came out into the world by visiting foreign courts.
The prince had often been in England, where he was much liked by his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and when over there the summer after her death he was invested by King Edward with the order of the garter.

Last spring the prince and his brother,
Prince Eitel, made a tour in the east, and came home by Rome, having an audience of the late Pope. Leo XIII. spoke of the young prince as the pambino plu-grande—the eldest little boy, much to the brother's amusement. Now the prince has settled down to military duty in Potsdam with his guard's regiment.

The crown prince shows his English origin by his love of outdoor life. He is a crack rider, and has competed in several military races—hardly altogether to his father's satisfaction, as the emperor detests horse racing. But shooting is his favorite pursuit—not in his court drives, but a quiet day's sport with only a forester in attendance. The prince has been very successful in deer stalking, and displays the utmost passion in following his quarry.
At home he proves his talent as a pianist, for all the prince has been taught some musical instrument, and the emperor and empress are very fond of quiet family musical evenings at Potsdam. The question of the day is:
"Will the crown prince marry?"
He is a little susceptible, but the choice of a wife is as yet in the balance.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon confesses to his personal friends that he sometimes chafes under the restrictions of his office as speaker of the house of representatives, but a quiet day's sport with only a forester in attendance. The

stalking, and displays the utmost passion in following his quarry.

THE INTERESTING THINGS A NATURALIST SEES IN THE SNOW.

How He Finds and Studies the Animals in Their Winter Homes—A Stroll Through the Woods.

A few days before the recent January thaw, I started for a tramp through the snow-covered woods. The thermometer stood at ten below zero, but, as the snow was 20 inches deep on the level, the exertion of getting through it made me glowing warm before I had gone half a mile, and when occasionally I got out of the wind, the air seemed almost spring-
like.

Whether we enjoy winter or dislike it depends largely on whether we are prepared for it or not. Cold weather has no terrors for us if we know that we are not going to be cold in it,
and when occasionally I got out of the wind, the air seemed almost spring-like. Whether we enjoy winter or dislike it depends largely on whether we are prepared for it or not. Cold
weather has no terrors for us if we know
that we are not going to be cold in it,
and when occasionally I got out of the wind, the air seemed almost spring-
like.

A pair of gloves, however, will go a long way toward making one enjoy a walk on a bitterly cold day. The gloves, but a good big pair, which allow for a generous air space around your hands inside, and with gamuties which come over the cuffs of your coat, and keep the wind and snow out of the snow. And if you are going along alone in bad weather, it is a wise precaution to tell your friends which direction you intend to take, and the length of time you expect to be gone.
When the snow is deep and the air intensely cold, a sprained knee or a broken leg may mean death, if assistance does not arrive in time.

I had not gone far into the woods when, in passing a low-growing wild apple tree, I noticed that the surface of the snow beneath it had been disturbed in an irregular manner. It was furrowed, and here and there there were holes, leading into little runways, which extended downward as far as I could see. The holes were much too large to have been made by a meadow mouse, and quite too small for a muskrat, and I doubt if I should have discovered what animal had made them, if the impudent head of a red squirrel had not appeared suddenly at the end of the runway. He had a look of astonishment on his face, and a small apple in his mouth. He dropped the apple on the snow in front of him, but retained the nut, and he looked at me for a moment, and then he disappeared into the hole. The little apple, lying upon the snow, told a pathetic story of the little fellow's hunger, and of his efforts to satisfy it, and I wondered if he had any sense keen enough to tell him where each individual apple lay.

"HE FLEW UPON MY FINGERS"

or whether he unlearned blindly, by the hope of finding one occasionally.
Further on I came to a stretch of half-open country, covered with barberry and other bushes. And here found the paths which the rabbits had made the night before, and all along these paths the twigs of the bushes under which the rabbits had been covering up their foot upon the ground, served them well in another way, by lifting them to a height at which they could crop tender twigs near the tops of the bushes.
But the most delightful incident of my walk occurred when I was nearing home. A flock of hungry chickadees flew into a maple tree above me, perhaps knowing that I had something to do with the many square meals they have enjoyed this winter. One of them hopped to a bare close above my head, and I felt in my pocket for some broken nuts. Taking off my glove, I extended the hand containing the offering, and I had his earnest attention in a moment. Down he came close to me, crying "Dee-dee-dee," and peering into my face with his black eyes as much as to say, "Is it all right? Come, now, is it?" But without waiting for a reply, he flew upon my finger, calmly picked up a piece of nut, and flew back into the maple tree. With my finger delightfully tingling from that delicate grasp, I went home feeling as though I had shaken hands with a fairy.

No
Man Is Stronger Than His Stomach

The statement that no man is stronger than his stomach will appeal to every man who has ever suffered from stomach "trouble."
He will remember the growing feeling of weakness until he was hardly able to crawl around, and could work only occasionally, and then with difficulty. The danger of dyspepsia roots in the fact that when disasters the stomach and other organs of the digestion and nutrition the whole body must be the sufferer, for when the stomach is diseased and the digestive processes are imperfectly performed, there is a sure loss of nutrition which is felt by every organ of the body.
Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It makes strong men because it makes "strong" stomachs, and enables the proper digestion of food and the perfect assimilation of the nutrition contained in the food.

"I have taken six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four or five vials of the little 'Pellets,' writes Mr. A. J. Vanderwater, of 873 West Division Street, Chicago, Ill. 'I am happy to say they have done me worlds of good. These medicines have made a great change in me; from a slow slope of a man that could hardly crawl, tired and sick all the time, could do no work, to a man who can work, sleep, eat and feel fine, and that tired feeling all gone away.' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and little 'Pelle-lets' have almost made a new man of me. I feel young as I did at thirty years.'"

Accept no substitute for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing else
"just as good" for diseases of the stomach, and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

viser, the best of modern medical works, is

STORY OF THE FUR TRADER.

BY NORMAN DUNCAN.

"Wouldn't it be a bore to be born on Cherry Hill, would you now?" said my new acquaintance.

Aboard the Virginia Lake, five miles off the coast of Labrador, and bound down, was far enough away from a New York tenement district to excuse my glance of surprise.

"Fact!" said he, with a nod. "That's where I was born and bred. And do you know how I came to be up here? No? Well, I'm a fur trader. I'm the man that bought the skin of that silver fox last winter for $30 and sold it for $250. I'd rather be the man that bought it from me and sold it in London for $600. But I'm not."

"And you're bound for home, now?" I asked.

"Yes," he drawled. "I'm bound home for New York to see the folks. I've been away for six years, and came nearer to leaving my bones up here in the north last spring than ever I did before. I've done some traveling in my time. You can take me at my word; I have."

The trader laughed uproariously. He was greatly pleased to meet a man from "the States," and he was in a volatile mood. I knew that he needed but little encouragement to tell me the story of his escape.

"It makes me think about that old riddle of the corked bottle," he said. "Ever hear it? This is it: If you had a bottle of ginger ale, how would you get the stuff out without breaking the bottle or drawing the cork? Can you answer that?"

"The answer doesn't occur to me," said I.

"That's just it," he burst out. "The way to do it doesn't occur to you. But if you had the bottle in your hands now and wanted the ginger ale, it would occur to you fast enough to push the cork in. Well, that was my case. You think of yourself on a little pan of ice, drifting straight out to sea with a strong offshore wind, water all round you and no paddle—just think of yourself in that case, and a way of getting ashore might not occur to you. But once you're there, you're right on that pan of ice, with the hand of death on your collar—you'll think like lightning of all the things you can do. Yes, that was my case."

I said nothing to interrupt the stocky, hard-featured, ill-clad little man while he mused.

"Don't you be fool enough to try to cross the bay this evening," says I to myself," he went on.

"But I'm a hundred-mile man, and I'd gone my hundred miles. I can carry grub on my back to last me just that far, and my grub was out! From what I knew of the wind and ice, I judged that the ice would be four or five miles out to sea by dawn of the next day. So I didn't start out with the idea that the trip would be as easy as a promenade over Brooklyn bridge of a moonlight night. Oh, no! I knew what I was doing. But it was a question of taking the risk or dragging myself into the settlement at Raquet Harbor in three days' time as lean as a cat-horse from starvation. You see, it was forty miles round that bay and four across; and—my grub was out. Many a man loses his life in these parts by looking at the question in just that way.

"Oh, no!" says I to myself. "You'd much better take your chance of starving, and walk round."

"It wasn't in human nature, though, to do it. Not when I saw that there was grub and a warm fire waiting for me at Raquet Harbor. Says I: 'I'll take the long chance and stand to win.' Don't you run away with the idea that the ice was a level field stretching from shore to shore, fitting the rocks and kept as neat as a baseball diamond. It wasn't. Some day in the winter the wind had jammed the bay full of big rough chunks—they call them paws in this country—and the frost had stuck them all together. When the spring came, of course the sun began to melt that glue, and the whole flow was just ready to fall apart when I had the bad luck to make the coast. I was a day too late. I knew it. And I knew that the offshore wind would sweep the ice to sea the minute it broke up.

"I made the first hundred yards in ten minutes; the second in fifteen more. In half an hour I'd made half a mile. The ice was rough enough and dimly enough to take the nerve out of any man.

"But that wasn't the worst; the worst was that there were hun- dreds of holes covered with a thin crust of snow—all right to look at, but treacherous. I knew that if I made the mistake of stepping on a crust instead of solid ice, I'd go through and down.

"I had four other skins, some martens and ten fine fox skins in the pack on my back. To do anything in the water with that handi- cap was too much for me. So I wasn't at all panicky about making time until I found that the night would catch me if I didn't wag along a little faster.

"No, sir," the trader said, look- ing me deep in the eyes. "I didn't want to be caught out there in the dark."

"By good luck, I struck some- big pans about half-way over. Then I took to a dog-trot, and left the yards behind me in a way that cheered me up. Just before dusk I got near enough to the other side to feel proud of myself, and I be- gan to think of what a fool I'd have been if I'd taken the shore route. A minute later I changed my mind. I felt the pack moving! Well, in a flash I said good-by to Cherry Hill and the boys. Not many men are caught twice in a place like that. They never have the second chance.

"There I was, aboard a rotten doe and bound out to the big, lone- ly ocean, at the rate of four miles an hour.

"Oh, you might as well get ready to go, Jim," thinks I. But I didn't give up. I loped along shoreward in a way that didn't take snow crust or air-holes into account. And I made the edge of the floe before the black hour of the night had come.

"There was a couple of hundred yards of cold water between me and the shore.

"This is the time you think more of your life than your fur," thinks I.

"There was a stray pan or two—little rafts of things—lying off the edge of the floe; and beyond them, scattered between the shore and me, half a dozen other pans were floating. How to get to the other side was a puzzle. They were 50 or 60 yards apart, most of them, and I had no paddle. It was foolish to think of making a shift with my jacket for a sail; the wind was out, not in, and I had no rudder.

"What had I? Nothing that I could think of. It didn't occur to me, as you say, I wish it had.

"Anyhow," says I to myself, "I'll get as far as I can."

"It was a short leap from the floe to the first pan. I made it easily. The second pan was farther off, but I thought I could jump the water between. So I took off my pack and threw it on the ice be- side me. It almost broke my heart to do it, for I'd walked 500 miles in the dead of winter for that fur; I'd been nearly starved and frozen, and I'd paid out hard-earned money. I put down my pack, took a short run, and jumped like a stag for the second pan.

"I landed on the spot I'd picked out. I can't complain of missing the mark, but instead of staying there, I shot clear through and down into the water.

"Surprised? I was worse than that. I was dead scared. For a minute I thought I was going to rise under the ice and drown right there.

"How it happened I don't know; but I came up between the pans, and struck out for the one I'd left. I got to the pan all right and climbed aboard. There I was on a little pan of ice, beyond the reach of the floe and leaving the shore behind me, and cold and pretty well discouraged.

"There's the riddle of the corked bottle," said the trader, inter- rupting his narrative. "Now, how do I happen to be sitting here?"

"I'm sure I can't tell," said I.

"No more you should," said he, "for you don't know what I car- ried in my pack. But you see I had the bottle in my hands, and I wanted the ginger ale bad; so I thought fast and hard.

"It struck me that I might do something with my line and jig- ger. A jigger, you know, is a lead fish, about three inches long, which spreads into two big barbed steel hooks at one end; the other end is tied to about 40 fathoms of stout, waxed fishing line. The fishermen of the coast use them to jerk big cod out of the water when there is no bait.

"Don't you see the chance the barbed steel hook and the 40 fathom of line gave me? When I thought of that jigger, I felt just like the man who is told to push the cork in when he can't draw it out.

"I'd got back to the pan where I'd thrown down my pack, you know; so there was the jigger right at hand.

"It was getting dark by this time—getting dark fast, and the pans were drifting farther and farther apart.

"It was easy to hook the jigger in the nearest pan and draw my pan over to it; for that pan was five times the weight of the one I was on. The one beyond was about the same size; they came to- gether at the half-way point. Of course this took time. I could hardly see the shore then, and it struck me that I might not be able to find it at all, when I came near enough to cast my jigger for it.

"About 50 yards off was a big pan. I sawing the jigger round and round and suddenly let the line shoot through my fingers. When I hauled it in the jigger came too, for it hadn't taken hold. That made me feel bad. I felt worse when it came back the second time. But I'm not one of the kind that gives up. I kept right on casting that jigger until it landed in the right spot.

"My pan crossed over as I hauled in the line. That was all right; but there was no pan between me and the shore.

"All up?" thinks I.

"It was dark. I could see nei- ther pan nor shore. Before long I couldn't see a thing in the pitchy blackness.

"All the time I could feel the pan bumping along toward the open sea. I didn't know how far off the shore was. I was in doubt about just where it was.

"Is this pan turning round?" thinks I. Well, I couldn't tell; but I thought I'd take a fier at hooking a rock or a tree with the jigger. The jigger didn't take hold. I tried a dozen times, and every time I heard it splash the water. But I kept on trying—and would have kept on till morning if I'd needed to. You can take me at my word, I'm not the kind of fool that gives up—I've been in too many tight places for that. So, at last I gave the jigger a fling that handed it somewhere where it held fast; but whether ice or shore I couldn't tell. If shore, all right; if ice, all wrong; and that's all I could do about it.

"Now," thinks I, as I began to haul in, "it all depends on the fish- ing line. Will it break, or won't it?"

"It didn't. So the next morning, with my pack on my back, I tramped round the point to Raquet Harbor."

"What was it?" was my foolish question. "Shore or ice?"

"If it hadn't been shore," said the trader, "I wouldn't be here." Whereupon he went below, for the dinner bell was ringing— Youth's Companion.

Commercial Coffee.

Coffee is the easiest thing in the trade to adulterate, even whole coffee being open to suspicion. That which is sold ground at 40 cents a pound is frequently half chicory, the latter being worth about eight cents. While chicory improves the flavor of coffee, ac- cording to most tastes, it defrauds the buyer in point of value. As the coffee bean improves with age, it is a good plan when sure of a pure, good article to buy in bulk, then roast and grind as needed.

Rest for the Eyes.

A medical journal says that in the continued use of the eyes in such work as sewing, typewriting, bookkeeping, reading and study- ing the saving point is looking up from the work at short intervals and looking around the room. This practiced every ten or fifteen minutes relieves the muscular ten- sion and rests the eyes.

We beg to inform planters and the trade generally that the

has been put in order, and with excellent facilities, again opens its doors for the sale of

LOOSE TOBACCO ON THE FLOOR.

Light Weights or in Hogsheads, or as our friends may prefer to sell. We invite the patronage of the thousands of our friends, who so liberally patronized us the past season, and earnestly solicit a trial shipment from those who have not so favored us.

We Have Good Quarters for Teams and Drivers in the Warehouse.

That the marketing of Tobacco on the open markets by concentrating the demands, will bring better results to sellers, is self-evident truth. Public meetings, stenographers, typewriters and their offspring "Resolutions," cannot better conditions. But united determination on the part of planters to offer their Tobacco on open markets to the highest bidders will bring face to fact every known demand for Tobacco. Help us to sell your tobacco for good prices by patronizing open market's. It stands planters in hand to think of this.

PROF. GOODWIN DEAD.

Was Once President of College in Hopkinsville.

Prof. A. C. Goodwin, formerly president of South Kentucky College, died Monday night in Jeffersonville, Ind., where he was superintendent of public schools of that city.

The direct cause of his death was due to uric acid. Last summer he went to Detroit to visit his sister, and was at the time in bad health. On his return to Jeffersonville in September his health was considerably improved. He continued at the head of the Jeffersonville schools until October, when he became ill of pneumonia.

Prof. Goodwin was one of the most prominent educators in Indiana. He was born in Clark county, Indiana, June 3, 1846. He was county superintendent in Clark county for several terms and was the Democratic nominee for superintendent of public instruction in Indiana in 1880. He has been at the head of the Jeffersonville school for the past five years.

End of Bitter Fight.

"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with an abscess on my right lung," writes J. F. Hughes, of DuPont, Ga. "and gave up. Everybody thought my time had come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. The benefit I received was striking and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I've entirely regained my health." It conquers all coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist. Price 50c, and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

DR. C. H. NASH.

Report of His Recent Speech at Bethel College, Russellville.

The students were greeted Wednesday morning at the chapel by Elder C. H. Nash, of Hopkinsville, says a correspondent in the Russellville Herald-Ledger. Ex-Pres. W. S. Ryland, D. D., opened the exercises with Bible reading and prayer. Pastors Overton, Methodist; Molloy, Presbyterian; Cheek, Baptist, and other visitors were present.

President Harrison would have been glad to have invited the public if chapel room had been sufficient.

The speaker, warmly greeted by the students and faculty, all too glad to get one hour from recitation, right nicely caught the boys on the start by saying that he would prefer quick death to the battle field to being bored to death by a dull teacher.

The young men knew they were not to be bored. He said he had two grudges against Russellville for taking Elder Cheek and President Harrison from those who loved them so much and he paid glowing tributes to the worth of these two noble men. He said his subject was "Common Place Things," and insisted that they knew then all he could tell them; he would only remind them of matters.

He told the boys that every chance of life was in their favor—all of young life was before them.

No condition of average existence being either certain success or inevitable failure. Not even poverty nor bodily infirmity is necessarily a barrier to success. The son of a very rich man is fortunate to become even half the man he might have been without the hindrance of too much money.

He said young men ought to have a purpose in life: too young yet to choose an occupation, but be ambitious (for the full meaning of which term—ambition—he referred them to their Professor in Latin). Have an ideal and work to its attainment. Right now care for body, brain and soul. He said a cinder in his eye once disqualified him for work, and young men must be clean: clear of eye, and they knew what that meant; see nothing, word, picture or nature that would suggest an unwholesome thought, guard the ear so as to hear nothing impure; keep the tongue clean to speak no word that mother or sister or sweetheart might not hear; to keep unsoiled hands that no man's money might stick to their fingers. The opinion which he expressed of some millionaires' methods was blistering.

The refrain of his advice was, never to be weary in well-doing; that one might feel weary but must never be weary, saying their Professor in Greek was prepared to tell them of the meaning of the word. To be ready to give way to every opposition in their studies argues badly for young men engaged in their noble work as college students. His peroration, while mainly intended for the ministerial body, was a splendid closing of a fine address to every friend of the college. President Harrison, with his fine faculty, and supported by an able Board of Trustees, is leading on a course which bids fair to make Bethel College a source of pride to its friends.

MR. GAMBLE COMING.

Will Appear at Holland's Opera House Feb. 23.

Mr. Joseph Monday, conductor of the St. George Choral Society, writing of Mr. Gamble's work in the London "Daily Mail," says:

"Mr. Ernest Gamble, the basso, appeared with the society six years ago, and we then became admirers of his wonderful voice, so powerful, so full of the velvet quality; of his youth and virility. Then Mr. Gamble depended upon his voice largely for his success. At last night's concert, one felt that Mr. Gamble had broadened and matured.

The voice, with its volume, range and quality, is still as beautiful as ever, but Mr. Gamble sings with more color, warmth, unction and finesse; he has learned repression and the economics of singing; he relies upon interpretation, tone-color, and style rather than upon heroics.

"His group of Dvorak's Biblical Lieders were impressively beautiful and showed him as an artist."

Mr. Gamble will appear at Holland's opera house next Tuesday night Feb. 23.
